COVER STORY: Jones Road Wildfire

The Jones Road Wildfire started mid-morning on April 22 in the Forked River Mountain Wilderness Area. Fueled by strong winds and extremely dry conditions over the past 6 months this fire quickly grew in size. Initial attempts by the New Jersey Forest Fire Service to contain the fire within control lines failed, and they were forced to start providing structure protection to the houses on Wells Mills Road. The gusty winds pushed the fire further east threatening the Garden State Parkway and the neighboring communities in Waretown and Lacey Townships. Over the next forty-eight hours the fire consumed 15,300 acres forcing residents to evacuate and initiating the response for hundreds of first responders to coordinate the efforts to protect residents and property within the path of this destructive fire.

“The Jones Road Wildfire was a sobering reminder of the power of nature and the importance of preparedness,” said Ocean County Commissioner Robert Arace. “In just 48 hours, over 15,000 acres were consumed, forcing evacuations and endangering homes, roadways, and entire neighborhoods.”

Historically fires of this nature in the Pines are not uncommon, and many of the species of plants that grow in this area rely on fire. The Pitch Pine is one of the most fire adapted species in the world. The thick bark on the tree keeps the vital infrastructure safe and most fires will not kill the tree. With a fire of this magnitude there will be significant tree mortality, but another adaptation of the Pitch Pine is that their cones open up from the heat and release seeds to the now burned cleared ground completing the cycle of life. The underbrush consisting of laurel, inkberry, blueberry, and scrub oak will quickly return. Within weeks of a fire like this the pine trees that survived will start sending out epicormic sprouts and the signs of life will be visible. The Pine Barrens landscape will return to this area, think of this devastating fire as “Natures Reset Button”.

Large scale events like this raise many questions from residents, first responders, and parks and recreation professionals. Could this have been prevented? Could something have been done differently? How do we keep this from happening again? These are all valid questions, and difficult to answer due to the many variables that affect fire behavior.

One thing that can be done is forest management. Ocean County Parks and Ocean County Planning have been working with a forestry consultant to develop a Forest Stewardship Plan for the Forked River Mountain Wilderness Area. That plan is nearly completed and pending approval from the New Jersey Pinelands Commission. Once approved the plan includes thinning the overstocked forest which will open the canopy and reduce the wildfire risk. The plan also includes the addition of large-scale fire breaks which when completed will give another anchor point for fire personnel to slow or stop an advancing fire front. Another benefit of thinning is that it greatly increases the safety of the first responders going in and fighting the fire, the reduced tree density allows them to use tactics to fight the fire more aggressively without putting them in a more dangerous situation. The main focus of the plan submitted to the Pinelands Commission is forest health. Wildfire risk reduction is an added benefit. While we may be a late in preventing the most recent devastation Ocean County is determined to be prepared to help prevent an incident of this magnitude in the future.

“The coordinated response by our firefighters, forest fire service, and local emergency personnel was nothing short of heroic,” said Commissioner Robert Arace. “I want to extend my deepest gratitude to every individual who put themselves in harm’s way to protect others. Their actions saved lives, homes, and entire communities.”

The true measure of a community is how it reacts during times of chaos, and Ocean County proved why we are the best county in the state of New Jersey. The outpouring of love and appreciation during this event were truly remarkable. Residents dropping off donations of water and snacks, businesses dropping off food to keep the first responders strong and prepared to do their job were greatly appreciated. Even as much as a simple thank you or a hand wave let them know how grateful we are for their hard work.

“In the face of crisis, the residents of Ocean County once again showed what true community looks like,” Arace said. “Their generosity and appreciation meant everything to the first responders who worked tirelessly to protect us.”

The County of Ocean would once again like to thank all of the first responders for the tireless work they did to help protect and save our community during this tragic event.

These days, social media and texts make it easy to let someone know how you feel about them. Back in the late 1800s, though, directly expressing your feelings was frowned upon. They developed a “language” of combining flowers to let that special someone know how they were feeling...whether it was love, compassion, jealousy, or even “I can’t stand the very thought of you!” Learn to use flowers to express your emotions with this fun and informative presentation.

Cattus Island Living Shoreline/Marsh Restoration Project

Cattus Island is the most significant salt marsh and the largest breakwater in the northern portion of Barnegat Bay. The overall goal of this project is to restore critical shoreline areas of Cattus Island County Park to address significant erosion and prevent extreme wetlands and habitat loss in the Barnegat Bay. Some areas of the park have lost more than 300 feet over the past 85 years. This erosion is likely to increase over time, if the shoreline, and especially the northeast peninsula known as “Page’s Point,” is not stabilized. This power point presentation is an overview of the changes along the shoreline and the plans for restoration.
